Stillness* Exhibition Set to Open at the Illinois State Museum on March 3, 2018

SPRINGFIELD, IL -- Stillness is an exhibition that celebrates the genre of still life as a reflection of our modern life. This exhibition, which opens on March 3 at the Illinois State Museum in Springfield, brings together paintings, drawings, prints, photographs, and sculpture created over the last 100 years from the museum's permanent collection.

Elizabeth Colwell, Primroses, c.1931, Illinois State Museum

The works selected draw from significant movements and approaches to artmaking of the modern and contemporary periods. The artists selected have rendered their moments, real or imagined, in a variety of artistic approaches, from precise realism to gestural exuberance, all to singular effect. This tension between representation and abstraction—between holding on and letting go—is key, shuttling us between the unmoving, quiet moment and the energetic, often urgent measure of that experience.

Nancy Hild, Happy Holidays, 1984, Illinois State Museum

The exhibition was organized by Associate Curator of Art Doug Stapleton and will run through June 3, 2018.
